Few Passengers knew He Was on the Train No Requests for Speeches and No Cheers At Washington He Didn't Leave Car Except for a Few Minutes.

ASHINGTON, Oct. 6 -There was no burralt to the beginning of Mr. Roosevelt's tour of the South and West that started this afternoon. From the time is left Jersey City, where a few friends had him good speed, until he arrived in Washington at 9:25 to-night the Colonel remained placid. He requested that he he left alone because he doesn't want to use his voice any more than he has to.

ok magazine is hitched on the rear of a Pennsylvania flier. Very few of the passengers knew that the great man was aboard If they did they made no attempt to call on him, which is a rather unusual experience for Mr Roosevelt At the various stops along the line the word was passed that the Colonel was on the train and a few curious persons on the platform craned their necks in the hope of catching a glumpse of him through the car windows. Paintings, but there were no requests for speeches
